

CATEGORY STANDARD 3-4

COCO THE CAT AND THE NEW NEIGHBOUR

Coco was a pretty white cat who lived in a cozy neighborhood. She was proud of her clean fur, pink collar, and shiny whiskers.

One day, a new animal moved in next door — it was Rocky, a rough-looking raccoon. His fur was messy, and he wore a ripped cap.

“He looks scary,” Coco whispered to her friend, Mimi the Rabbit.

“He might be rude,” said Mimi.

Every day, they watched Rocky from a distance.

But one afternoon, Coco got her paw stuck in a fence while chasing a butterfly. She cried for help.

Suddenly, Rocky came running. “Hold still!” he said kindly. He carefully pulled her paw out and gave her some water.

Coco looked at him in surprise. “You’re... nice?”

Rocky smiled. “Of course. I love helping others.”

Coco felt sorry. “I judged you too quickly.

Want to play with us tomorrow?”

From that day, Coco and Rocky became good friends.

Moral: Don’t judge others before you know them.

CATEGORY STANDARD 3-4

MAX THE MONKEY LEARNS PATIENCE

Max the Monkey was always jumping around.

He didn't like waiting for anything.

At school, he interrupted the teacher.

At home, he ate food before it was cooked.

One day, his grandmother said, "Let's make banana cake!"

Max got excited. "Yay! Let's eat now!"

"No," Grandma said. "First, we mix the batter, then bake, and wait."

Max groaned but helped anyway.

He stirred, he poured, and then... he had to wait.

While waiting, he read a book and helped Grandma clean.

Finally, ding! the oven rang.

The banana cake smelled amazing!

Max took a bite. "Wow! This is the best!"

Moral: Good things come to those who wait.

CATEGORY STANDARD 3-4

LILY THE CHICKEN SAVES THE FARM

Lily was the smallest chicken on the farm.

The other animals didn't notice her much.

They said, "She's too tiny to help."

But Lily was smart and observant. She always watched and listened.

One night, while everyone was sleeping, Lily heard a strange sound—"crack... crack..."

She looked out and saw a hole in the fence.

A fox was sneaking in!

Lily ran to the bell and rang it loudly—DING! DING! DING!

The animals woke up and chased the fox away.

Farmer Joe came running. "Who rang the bell?"

Lily raised her wing.

"You saved us, Lily!" the cows cheered.

From that day, Lily was known as the smallest hero with the biggest heart.

Grandma smiled. "See? Good things take time."

Max nodded. From then on, he learned to be patient.

Moral: Even the smallest can make a big difference.

CATEGORY STANDARD 3-4

OSCAR THE OWL AND THE MIDNIGHT LESSON

Oscar was a young owl who studied at Night Forest School.

One evening, he forgot to do his homework.

“Oh no!” he said. “What will I do?”

He looked at his best friend Nina’s notebook and quickly copied her answers.

The next day, Teacher Bear looked at the work and asked, “Oscar, did you copy?”

Oscar felt hot. “No,” he lied.

But Nina looked sad. She didn’t say a word.

That night, Oscar couldn’t sleep. He felt guilty.

The next morning, he stood up and said, “Teacher, I copied Nina’s work. I’m sorry.”

Teacher Bear nodded. “Thank you for being honest.

You must redo the homework, but I’m proud you told the truth.”

Oscar apologized to Nina.

She smiled.

“It’s okay. Next time, just ask for help.”

Oscar learned that honesty brings peace.

Moral: Always tell the truth, even if it’s hard.

CATEGORY STANDARD 3-4

TARA THE TURTLE TRIES SOMETHING NEW

Tara was a quiet turtle who always did the same things—ate the same food, walked the same path, and stayed in her shell when it rained.

Her friends invited her to try new things.

“Come play hide and seek!” said Rabbit.

“Let’s try painting!” said Bird.

But Tara said, “No thank you. I’ll just sit here.”

One day, a new animal came to the meadow—a fun, bouncy kangaroo named Kiki.

Kiki invited Tara to try jumping on leaves.

Tara laughed, “I can’t jump!”

“Just try!” Kiki smiled.

So Tara tried... and fell.

But she laughed!

She tried again—and this time, she made a small hop.

All the animals cheered.

Tara felt so proud.

From that day on, she said, “I’ll try first before I say no.”

Moral: Don’t be afraid to try new things.

CATEGORY STANDARD 3-4

BRUNO'S SECOND CHANCE

Bruno was a stray dog who had no home. People in the town avoided him because he looked dirty and wild.

“Stay away from that dog,” they warned their children.

But deep down, Bruno was kind and gentle.

One rainy evening, little Aria saw Bruno hiding under a bench, shivering. She felt sorry for him.

“Come here, boy,” she whispered, offering a sandwich. Bruno slowly came closer.

Aria visited Bruno every day.

She gave him food and talked to him.

One day, Aria's cat ran out into the street. A car was coming!

Before anyone could move, Bruno jumped and pulled the cat to safety.

Everyone saw what Bruno did.

“He’s a hero!” someone shouted.

From that day, Bruno wasn’t a stray anymore.

The townspeople built him a little doghouse, and he lived happily near Aria’s home.

He got his second chance—and gave others a reason to believe in kindness.

Moral: Everyone deserves a second chance.

CATEGORY STANDARD 3-4

THE BIRD WHO FORGOT TO FLY

Pico was a young bird who lived in a big tree with his brothers and sisters. They all learned to fly—except Pico.

“I’m scared,” he said. “What if I fall?”

“Don’t worry,” said Mama Bird. “You will fly when you’re ready.”

Days passed. His siblings flew across the sky, but Pico stayed in the nest.

One afternoon, dark clouds rolled in.

A storm was coming.

Suddenly, the tree shook, and the nest began to break!

“Fly, Pico!” Mama shouted.

“I... I can’t!” he cried.

But as the wind blew harder, Pico spread his wings.

He flapped, once, twice...

Then—he lifted off!

He was flying!

The storm howled around him, but Pico flew strong and fast.

When he landed safely beside his family, he smiled.

“I was scared, but I did it.”

Moral: Face your fears and you will grow stronger.

CATEGORY STANDARD 3-4

THE CLEVER FOX'S HONEST DAY

Felix the Fox was clever—but not always honest.

He often tricked the other animals to get what he wanted.

He once told the ducks there was free bread behind the barn—just so he could steal their snacks.

One day, the forest held a contest: “Who can find the missing golden acorn?”

Felix was excited.

He followed clues and found it hidden under a log.

But as he picked it up, he saw a squirrel crying nearby.

“That acorn belongs to my grandfather,” the squirrel sobbed.

Felix paused. He could win a prize if he kept it... but the squirrel looked so sad.

Felix took a deep breath.

“Here you go. I think this is yours.”

The squirrel hugged him. “Thank you for being honest.”

Later, the forest animals found out what Felix did.

They clapped and said, “You’re not just clever—you have a good heart too.”

Felix felt happier than any prize could bring.

Moral: Being honest builds real respect.

CATEGORY STANDARD 3-4

ELIZA THE ELEPHANT'S BIG MISTAKE

Eliza the Elephant loved playing in the field with her friends.

One day, while kicking a coconut like a ball, she accidentally knocked over Farmer Lim's fence.

"Oh no..." she whispered.

"Let's run before anyone sees!" said her friend, Leo the Leopard.

But Eliza felt bad.

That night, she couldn't sleep.

The next morning, she walked to Farmer Lim's house.

"I'm sorry, sir," she said. "I broke your fence. It was an accident."

Farmer Lim looked surprised.

"You told the truth?"

Eliza nodded.

He smiled. "Thank you for being honest. Let's fix it together."

Eliza helped repair the fence. She felt proud.

From then on, the animals respected her not just for her strength—but her honesty too.

Moral: Take responsibility for your actions.

CATEGORY STANDARD 3-4

FRANKIE THE FROG FINDS HIS VOICE

Frankie was a quiet frog. He didn't like arguments, and he never spoke up, even when something felt wrong.

At the pond school, a group of big frogs bullied a small turtle named Timmy.

They laughed at his shell and pushed him around.

Frankie watched silently, his heart aching. "This isn't right," he thought.

But he was scared.

"What if they bully me too?"

The next day, the bullies started again. Timmy looked like he would cry.

Frankie took a deep breath and shouted, "Stop! That's not kind!"

Everyone froze. The big frogs blinked.

One of them mumbled, "We were just joking..."

But Frankie stood tall. "You don't make jokes that hurt others."

Soon, more animals joined him. The bullies walked away.

Timmy looked up. "Thank you, Frankie."

Frankie smiled. That day, he found his voice—and used it to do what was right.

Moral: Speak up for what's right.